252-pound — Don Moore, Camanche, defeated Billy Bock, 13, of Little Rock.

White River Distributors made a profit by selling Prestone for $2.57 a gallon, resisted the action on ground that the 1937 act was unconstitutional.

The Chancery Court agreed that the act is illegal and so, on appeal did the Supreme Court.

Union Carbide said that there was no contest that Union Carbide did not have the right to fix the price for retail sale of Prestone, but that it did not have a written agreement with the retailers, either direct or through its wholesaler.

Arkansas Court held the act was void under several sections of the Arkansas Constitution, but the Supreme Court said its ruling was not binding on the state, which says no one shall be deprived of property without due process of law.

The court said the right of the Batesville retailer to sell at a reduced price was a "valuable property right."

The Supreme Court said it did not consider validity of the act on the ground that it prevents retail customers from causing price increases to cost first buyers we do not conceive that to be the purpose of the act, and secondly, and because it is unconstitutional.

White River Distributors made a profit by selling at $2.97 per gallon.

The decision noted that Supreme Courts in 11 states have held constitutional acts containing sections similar to the one involved in the Arkansas case.

The court added we can only say that we have carefully considered each of the decisions and reached our own conclusion.

Litigation involving Union Carbide and White River Distributors first filed in Hot Springs, U.S. District Court, Judge Lemley handed down an opinion in which he said he believed the "act" traded on a right of private individuals to sell at a price above that of the market.

White River Distributors, however, had said that the "act" was unconstitutional.

IV. Chancery Court. Union Carbide and Carlton Corp. applied to Chancery Court for an injunction to prevent White River Distributors, a Batesville retailer, from selling Prestone, an automobile anti-freeze, at less than $3.75 per gallon.

Union Carbide claimed its petition on a written contract it had with one Arkansas retailer that the product was to be sold for not less than $3.75 per gallon. Carlton did not have a contract with White River Distributors.

Under the pricing act, the type of distributor bound an Arkansas retailer to sell for that minimum.

White River Distributors, which was selling Prestone for $2.87 a gallon, resisted the action on ground that the 1937 act was unconstitutional.

The Chancery Court agreed that the act is illegal and, so, on appeal did the Supreme Court.

Union Carbide said that there was no contest that Union Carbide did not have the right to fix the price for retail sale of Prestone. Carlton, however, claimed a written agreement with the retailers, either direct or through its wholesaler.

White River Distributors, which was selling Prestone for $2.87 a gallon, resisted the action on ground that the 1937 act was unconstitutional.

The Chancery Court held the act was void under several sections of the Arkansas Constitution, but the Supreme Court said its ruling was not binding on the state, which says no one shall be deprived of property without due process of law.

White River Distributors made a profit by selling Prestone for $2.57 a gallon, resisted the action on ground that the 1937 act was unconstitutional.

The Chancery Court agreed that the act is illegal and so, on appeal did the Supreme Court.

Union Carbide said that there was no contest that Union Carbide did not have the right to fix the price for retail sale of Prestone, but that it did not have a written agreement with the retailers, either direct or through its wholesaler.

Arkansas Court held the act was void under several sections of the Arkansas Constitution, but the Supreme Court said its ruling was not binding on the state, which says no one shall be deprived of property without due process of law.

The court said the right of the Batesville retailer to sell at a reduced price was a "valuable property right."

The Supreme Court said it did not consider validity of the act on the ground that it prevents retail customers from causing the price to cost first and we do not conceive that to be the purpose of the act, and secondly, and because it is unconstitutional.

White River Distributors made a profit by selling at $2.97 per gallon.

The decision noted that Supreme Courts in 11 states have held constitutional acts containing sections similar to the one involved in the Arkansas case.

The court added we can only say that we have carefully considered each of the decisions and reached the same conclusion.

Litigation involving Union Carbide and White River Distributors first filed in Fort Smith, U.S. District Court, Judge Lemley handed down an opinion in which he said he believed the "act" was unconstitutional.

U.S. public reported seeing explosions on Yonkingman, "eight miles to the north of the Tachers," and that the "explosion" was "so intense, it was speculated" the explosives came from demolition work on the Tachers.

Communist terrorists, however, were spotted by air, but officers aboard the ship saw no explosion.

Union Carbide and Carlton Corp. applied to Chancery Court for an injunction to prevent White River Distributors, a Batesville retailer, from selling Prestone, an automobile anti-freeze, at less than $3.75 per gallon.

Union Carbide claimed its petition on a written contract it had with one Arkansas retailer that the product was to be sold for not less than $3.75 per gallon, and did not have a contract with White River Distributors.

Under the pricing act, the type of distributor bound an Arkansas retailer to sell for that minimum.

The Supreme Court said it did not consider validity of the act on the ground that it prevents retail dealers from causing price increases.

The court said the act was moderately effective; barrows and gulls mostly 25¢ higher with instances 50¢ higher, particularly on weights under 130 pounds.

The higher trend in the market wasn't unanimous. Railroads had difficulty in getting ahead, but those managed to rise as goods were shipped.

The Sweetwater somewhat mixed. Motors were generally higher. Coppers were up in the middle of the market, while demands for metal at higher prices. Chemicals were up. Oils were mixed.

The court said the "act" was "designed to give the public a sense of security to some extent" but "it was not designed to give the public a sense of security to some extent."

It was believed Adm. Alfred M. Price, the fleet commander, had been asked to speak at the order.

Court Rules Fair

IV Chancery Court, Union Carbide and Carlton Corp. applied to Chancery Court for an injunction to prevent White River Distributors, a Batesville retailer, from selling Prestone, an automobile anti-freeze, at less than $3.75 per gallon.

Union Carbide claimed its petition on a written contract it had with one Arkansas retailer that the product was to be sold for not less than $3.75 per gallon, and did not have a contract with White River Distributors.

Under the pricing act, the type of distributor bound an Arkansas retailer to sell for that minimum.

White River Distributors, which was selling Prestone for $2.57 a gallon, resisted the action on ground that the 1937 act was unconstitutional.

The Chancery Court agreed that the act is illegal and so, on appeal did the Supreme Court.

Union Carbide said that there was no contest that there was no one shall be deprived of property without due process of law.

The court said the right of the Batesville retailer to sell at a reduced price was a "valuable property right."

The Supreme Court said it did not consider validity of the act on the ground that it prevents retail customers from causing the price to cost first and we do not conceive that to be the purpose of the act, and secondly, and because it is unconstitutional.

White River Distributors made a profit by selling at $2.97 per gallon.

The decision noted that Supreme Courts in 11 states have held constitutional acts containing sections similar to the one involved in the Arkansas case.

The court added we can only say that we have carefully considered each of the decisions and reached the same conclusion.

Litigation involving Union Carbide and White River Distributors first filed in Fort Smith, U.S. District Court, Judge Lemley handed down an opinion in which he said he believed the "act" was unconstitutional.

U.S. public reported seeing explosions on Yonkingman, "eight miles to the north of the Tachers," and that the "explosions were so intense that it was speculated" the explosives came from demolition work on the Tachers.

U.S. Communist terrorists were spotted by air, but officers aboard the ship saw no Communists, and "saw no sign of communism" to any of them in that area.

Helicopters hovering over Yonkingman, "which was finished in the early morning," landed in the dark night, and "dropped a bomb."

Becker had sent this earlier report to the White House, and destroyers, battleships in the choppy-blue-green waters, without sight of the long, brown and craggy islands.

24 Horses
Perish in Arizona Fire

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Fire swept through an 80-stall barn at Arizona Downs racetrack early today, killing 24 horses and destroying several 24 stalls.

Preliminary damage estimates by James Hebeureus, a horseman, put the damage at the loss of 24 horses and equipment at about $5,000.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, began about 2:30 a.m. and the alarm was spread by William J. Slatier, a grocer, who was awakened by the noise.

Hebeureus said 12 of the horses were trapped by flames and died in their stalls. A 13th was so burned it had to be put down.

No human beings were killed or injured in the fire.

The 24 horses, which had been brought to the racetrack to be shipped home for burial.

Mississippi Town Welcome Home Talent

By WAYNE OLIVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Leoncavallo, who had his greatest critical triumph in the recent NBC broadcast of the opera Tosca, has another important date coming up.

On Feb. 11, he will be the guest of the Chamber of Commerce in his home town of Laurel, Miss., presenting the first concert there.

He will be followed by Tosca as a lead opera role in TV.

Perhaps even more heart-warming than the laudatory reviews of her performance by the critics, the country was the response in her home town.

"Practically every television set in Laurel, both white and Negro, is showing Tosca," said the editor of the newspaper had a wonderful editorial about my performance," she says. "I was

The attractive singer, a well-proportioned 5 feet 5½, says she considers her selection for the title role of Tosca as the most important in her career that color barriers in the artistic world are dissolving.

But she also expressed pleasure at an NBC station's decision to present Tosca role neither because of its color nor in spite of the fact she was a Negro.

"I think it would be wise to let him do it," she said. "I'm afraid he would be afraid to do it if he
